Divorce With Children
When Spouses Do Not Agree
Form Instructions

Use this form:

1. If you and/or your spouse have lived in Indiana for the last six (6) months.
2. If you and/or your spouse have lived in their current county for at least the past three (3) months.
3. You and your spouse have biological or adopted minor children together.
4. You and your spouse do not have an agreement on custody, parenting time, and/or how property and debts should be divided.

Before you get started

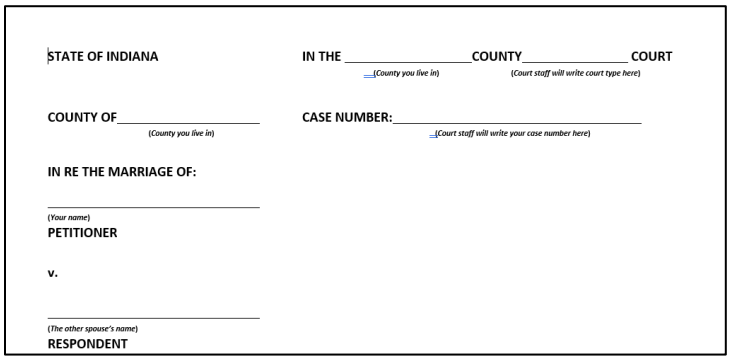

- All forms included in this form packet are required to file your divorce case with the court.

- You may choose to file your documents at the courthouse in the county where you live or in the county where your spouse lives, or to e-file them. If you want to file your paper documents at the courthouse, you will need to print them when you have finished filling them out. You can review the information about how to file your forms with the court in-person at this link: https://indianalegalhelp.org/how-to-file-forms-with-the-court-in-person/

- If you choose to e-file, instead of filing in-person, make sure you review the information at this link: https://indianalegalhelp.org/how-to-electronically-file-forms-with-the-court/

- There is a filing fee. Find the contact information for your local county clerk's office at this link and contact them to find out what the filing fee is: https://www.in.gov/courts/files/court-directory.pdf. You might qualify for a fee waiver. You can learn more about filing for a fee waiver here: https://indianalegalhelp.org/filing-fee-frequently-asked-questions/

The picture above is a "Caption" and is at the top of each form. You will fill in the county information and your name. The court staff will complete court information and your case number.

The icon to the left is the "Petitioner" icon. Wherever you see the Petitioner icon, you will begin filling in the blanks with the correct information. Once you see the Court Staff icon, stop filling in the blanks until you see the Petitioner icon again. The Court Staff icon is explained below.

The icon to the left is the "Court Staff" icon. Wherever you see the Court Staff icon, the court staff will fill in the blanks with the required information. Do not complete anything in areas where you see the Court Staff con.

There may be entire pages in this form packet that only the court staff or notary public will complete. These pages will only have the Court Staff icon and no Petitioner icons.

Forms Included in this Packet:

1.) Appearance
- This is the form that tells the court and the other party (your spouse) how to contact you if they need to.

2.) Civil Appearance Form
- This is the form that asks for the social security numbers of all parents and minor children involved in the case. This is a private form that the public will not be able to see.

3.) Verified Petition for Dissolution of Marriage
- This is the form that asks the court to start your divorce case.

4.) Summons

- This form will be served to your spouse to let them know you have opened a divorce case with the court. On the form, you will choose how your spouse will receive this form.

5.) Order Setting Provisional Hearing (This form should only be used if you are requesting a provisional hearing.)

- If you want the court to tell the parties how they have to behave and what they are responsible for after the case is opened but before it is finalized, you will select that choice in your Verified Petition for Dissolution of Marriage. If you do want a hearing, you must complete this form so the court will schedule a time for you to come to court and notify the other party. At this hearing, the judge will make decisions about the minor child(ren), the marital residence, debts, personal property, vehicles, and temporary restraining orders. The judge will sign a temporary order that will be put in place until your divorce case is finalized. That order is called a Provisional Order, described below.
- You must come to court on the day and time the court puts in the Order Setting Provisional Hearing.

6.) Provisional Order (This form should only be used if you are requesting a provisional hearing.)

- This is a temporary order that will be put in place until your divorce case is finalized. The judge will make decisions about the minor child(ren), the marital residence, debts, personal property, vehicles, and temporary restraining orders.

7.) Motion for Final Hearing

- This form lets the court know that at least sixty (60) days has passed since you filed your Verified Petition for Dissolution of Marriage and you or your spouse want the court to schedule a final hearing for your divorce case because there are some things you both do not agree on about the minor child(ren), the marital residence, debts, personal property, vehicles, and/or other things concerning the divorce, and would like the court to schedule a final hearing to decide these matters and to finalize your divorce case. File this form when you are ready for the court to schedule a final hearing, but no earlier than sixty (60) days after you filed your Verified Petition for Dissolution of Marriage. You will have to give a copy of this Motion to your spouse before you file it.

8.) Order Setting Final Hearing

- This form sets the date and time of the final hearing for your divorce case. Be prepared to present evidence about anything you and your spouse do not agree on at this hearing, including the minor child(ren), the marital residence, debts, personal property, and vehicles. Bring any documentation about debts, assets, and income to court. This could include things like bank statements, tax returns, W-2s, a copy of your mortgage or lease, or other loan documents. File this form with your Motion for Final Hearing.

9.) Decree of Dissolution of Marriage

- This is the form the judge fills out to finalize and end your divorce case. This final order will permanently decide all matters concerning the minor child(ren), the marital residence, debts, personal property, and vehicles. File this form if the judge asks you to provide a proposed decree at the end of your final hearing.

Things to Know About Filing Your Court Forms:

- After completing your initial forms and filing them with the court, you have to make a reasonable effort to get a copy of the following forms to your spouse:
    - Appearance
    - Verified Petition for Dissolution of Marriage
    - Summons
    - Notice of Provisional Hearing- (if you have asked for this)
    - Order on Provisional Hearing- (if you have asked for this)

- The clerk will give you options:
    - You can pay to have the sheriff give the completed forms to your spouse,
    - You can pay to have a process server give the completed forms to your spouse, or
    - You can pay to have the clerk mail the papers by certified mail.

It may be hard to find your spouse, but you have to show the court that you really tried. If you cannot find your spouse, make sure you have proof that you really looked for them. This might mean searching social media and using other online resources. If you still cannot find your spouse to get them copies of the forms, the court might allow you to give notice by publishing in a newspaper. You can find links to more information on notice here: https://indianalegalhelp.org/service-frequently-asked-questions/

Terms You May Need to Know

Dissolution of Marriage- This means a marriage is officially ended by a court, so the two people are no longer married. It's another way to say divorce.

Domestic Relations With Children Case (DC)- The court rules in Indiana define what the letters and numbers in the case number mean. These two letters, DC, which are part of your case number, mean this case is a divorce case involving children.

Related Cases- Sometimes there can be other cases that have the same parties and the same kind of issues, like if the Department of Child Services is involved with the family, if the spouses have a protective order case open where one spouse has been harassing the other, or there may be a property dispute case between the spouses about land or property one or the other party owns. Also, it's possible that someone other than the parent(s) was responsible for caring for the child under a Minor Guardianship case. Those types of cases would be considered "Related Cases".

Provisional Order- This is a temporary decision made by a court to tell the parties how they have to behave and what they are responsible for while the case is open. This helps make sure bills are being paid while the case is open but before the court decides who will be responsible for what debt at the end. The Provisional Orders end when the court issues the final order, which is the decree.

Continuous Resident- This means a person has been living in the same place, without living anywhere else, for a certain period of time.

Incapacitated- This means a person is not able to take care of themselves or make decisions because of an illness, injury, disability, or age.

Irretrievable Breakdown- This means the marriage is so damaged that the two people cannot fix it or live together again.

Fit and Proper- This means someone is responsible and capable of doing a good job and is the right person for the job of taking care of the child(ren).

Assets and Personal Property- These are things either of the parties owns that have value, like money, a house, a car, or personal belongings, like clothes, furniture, or electronics, and things like that.

Quitclaim Deed- This is a legal paper that gives ownership of property from one person to another without making any promises that the property is free of problems, like debts or disputes.

Necessary Relief- This means a court gives a fair solution to a problem, based on what seems right and reasonable in the situation.

Perjury- When a person makes a false statement under oath in the things they say in case documents or when they testify in court, when they know the statement is false or they don't believe the statement is true.

Custodial Parent- This is the parent who the child lives with most of the time after a separation or divorce. If the child(ren) spends nearly equal time with each parent, the court will name one of them the custodial parent, but this is only to say who will pay controlled expenses. Controlled expenses are defined below.

Noncustodial Parent- This is the parent who the child does not live with most of the time after a separation or divorce. This parent usually has parenting time rights and may also pay child support. If the child(ren) spends nearly equal time with each parent, the court will name one of them the non-custodial parent, but this is only to say who will not pay controlled expenses. Controlled expenses are defined below.

Joint Legal Custody- This means the parents will share the responsibility for the major decisions for the child's upbringing, including education, health care, and religious training. This is typically used when the parents are able to work things out between themselves about these topics.

Sole Legal Custody- This means that while both parents are allowed to make day-to-day decisions about the child, the parent that has "Sole Legal Custody" is the parent that makes the major decisions about the child's upbringing, including education, health care, and religious training, after talking with the other parent.

Primary Physical Custody- The parent that has "Primary Physical Custody" is usually the parent the child will live with most of the time. This parent, often called the "custodial parent", is the one responsible for the care and supervision of the child most of the time. Usually, the other parent, often called the "noncustodial parent", and the child will have parenting time together on days when the child is not staying with the custodial parent.

Parenting Time Guidelines- The Indiana Parenting Time Guidelines are official rules that show how parents that don't live together should share time with their children. They provide a minimum amount of time for when each parent can spend time with their child. These guidelines are meant to help make sure kids get to see both parents and that their needs are met fairly.

Child Support- Child support is money one parent has to pay to help take care of the child after the parents are no longer living together. The amount of money is based on how much money both parents make and what the child needs, like food, a place to live, and school. The goal is for the child to have a similar life as if the parents were still living together. Both parents share the costs, based on how much money they each make.

Income Withholding Order- An Income Withholding Order in a family law case is a court order that tells your employer to take money directly from your paycheck to pay for child support. This money is then sent to the other parent or to the Indiana State Central Collection Unit (INSCCU), which will then pass it along to the other parent. It helps ensure that payments are made regularly and on time.

Controlled Expenses- Controlled expenses are costs for things like clothing, school supplies, and personal care that the custodial parent, the parent who primarily takes care of the child, pays for. These expenses are not paid for by the other parent and are only covered by the custodial parent. Examples include buying a winter coat or paying for schoolbooks.

Child Support Arrearage- Child support arrearage, sometimes known as back child support, is the amount of money that is still owed because it hasn't been paid when it was supposed to be paid. It is the total of all missed child support payments. If there is any arrearage, sometimes a court will include an additional amount of child support that goes toward paying off the arrearage.

Spousal Maintenance- This is money one spouse may have to pay the other after a divorce, to help them support themselves, especially if they didn't work or didn't make as much money. When deciding if spousal maintenance is needed, the court looks at things like how long the marriage lasted, how the couple lived during the marriage, how much money each spouse has, how educated each spouse is, and how much each spouse can earn.

Date of Final Separation- This is the day when a couple stops living together as a married couple, and they begin living separately, even if the divorce isn't final yet.

Certificate of Service- Note*: You will need to know these options each time you have to tell the court how you served court papers to the other person in the case. Come back to this definition when you need to remember what your options are, like when you are completing the Certificate of Service sections in the forms included in this packet.

When a court case begins, it's important for both sides to know about it and receive official forms. This is called "service of process." These forms tell them about the case and their rights. You are required to give a copy of every form you file with the court to every other person involved in the case. You must say when you gave them the copies and how you gave them the copies. Here are the ways to get them their copies:

> First Class U.S. mail- You can serve the court forms by paying to have them sent by certified mail. The clerk will ask you to complete the Certified Mail card. The clerk will serve the court forms by Certified Mail. Certified mail ensures that the court forms have been signed for and received.

Hand Delivery- You can serve the court forms by paying to have a sheriff or private company hand- deliver them to the other party. Ask the clerk for information on how to use the Sheriff's office to serve your court forms.

Indiana's E-Filing System- You can serve the court forms by filing your documents electronically. Ask the clerk for information on how to e-file your court forms.

Clerk's Certificate of Mailing- This is where the Clerk of the Court says what date they mailed certain documents, who they mailed them to, and how they were mailed.

Return on Service of Summons by Mail- This is where the Clerk of the Court says what happened with the documents they mailed. Only one of the options will be completed.

Return of Service of Summons by Sheriff- This is where the Sheriff will say how the documents were delivered, and the date they were delivered.

ORDER SETTING PROVISIONAL HEARING

A Verified Petition for Dissolution of Marriage asking the court for provisional orders has been filed in this Court. The Court has set this matter for a Provisional Hearing, where the court will make decisions for how important family and property matters will be handled while the case is still ongoing. The parties must go to court and be prepared to show evidence to support how they want the court to decide on the issues of child custody, parenting time, child support, health insurance, spousal support, who will need to pay what debts and bills, and who should have what property. The provisional orders will only be in force while the case is still ongoing. Provisional orders end when the court issues the final order, which is the decree. If a party does not come to this hearing, the court may make decisions without that party.

IT IS SO ORDERED that this case will be heard on: _____.
